Among the topics discussed in the group were: "Difficulties in Managing Money," "Spending the Food Dollar," "Planning the Family Budget," "The Keeping of Household Accounts," and "Making the Budget Work."

NEW PRESIDENT NOT YET CHOSEN

Board's Committee Is Gathering Data

A committee appointed by the University board of trustees to recommend a successor to Dr. Frank L. McVey, who is due to retire next year, has not reached the point of considering any individuals for the presidency of the school, it was said last week.

"So far, we are just getting a lot of information," Judge Richard C. Stoll, chairman of the committee and chairman of the trustees' executive committee, said. He declined to comment upon a dispatch from Ashland, Ky., which quoted Governor Chandler as saying he would consider taking the post if it were offered to him without controversy.

Lee Kirkpatrick of Paris, superintendent of schools in that city, said the only meeting of the committee he had attended was conducted June 10 in Judge Stoll's law offices here. Discussion was confined to the methods to be followed in arrival at a decision, he said, and there was no formal consideration of anyone as a possible successor to Dr. McVey.

Other members of the committee, named June 2 by Governor Chandler at the last meeting of the University trustees, are Mrs. Paul Blazer of Ashland; R. P. Hobson of Louisville, and Horace Cleveland of Frankfort.

Total Is 160 Less Than All-Time High Of Last Year

A total of 780 students had signed for classwork of the second semester of the Summer Session when the first day of registration ended at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in Alumni gym.

This was 160 less than last year's first day enrollment of 940 which set an all-time high for the opening day of the second semester.

This decrease was believed due to the fact that 275 WPA adult teachers were enrolled for courses last year; the WPA workers' course is not being offered this summer.

Recent legislation by the United States congress ordered dropped from WPA rolls for a period of 30 days all who had been on relief for more than 18 months.

When this was done it was found that a large percentage of those expecting to take the adult education course were off relief. Therefore, it was necessary to discontinue the course which had been held for four successive summers.

However, Doctor Adams expressed optimism concerning the enrollment, pointing out that, excluding the 275 taking the adult course, it would be found that this year's figures were higher than those of last year.

Enrollment of regular students will continue through Thursday, July 20, in the Administration building. This year, for the first time, only three days will be allowed for signing for regular classwork.

To be enrolled later will be those taking work in the annual athletic coaching school to be offered August 7-12.

Dixiana Farm Has Long Tradition Of Hospitality

By MINTA ANNE HOCKADAY
(Bluegrass Editor)

"Sewing machine, lightening rod and book agents, keep out. Only a good horse wanted. All lovers of dogs and horses and all friends who will remain to dine with me are welcome."

Showing a typical southern hospitality, this inscription was engraved on a sign which hung on the gate at Dixiana back in the 1860's when Major Barak G. Thomas owned the place.

Those were the days when Domino was foaled at Dixiana, giving the farm a lasting fame with his record as an unbeaten two-year-old and his winnings of $179,000 during the year.

In 1893 the farm was bought by Major Thomas J. Carson who, by the way, was considered the best judge of whisky in Kentucky. Major Carson later gave the sign to his friend, August Belmont, and it now hangs in Belmont Park.

After passing through the hands of James Ben Ali Haggin and James Cox Brady, Dixiana was sold in 1928 to Charles T. Fisher, Detroit, executive of the Fisher Body Company and vice-president of General Motors.

Situated on the banks of the Elkhorn six miles north of Lexington on the Russell Cave pike, Dixiana now holds about 150 thoroughbred and saddle horses on its 740 acres. T. Ross Long, assisted by his brother, Allan, manages the farm.

Hundreds of trees and several miles of plank fences add to the beauty of Dixiana with its immense stables, the stone bridges crossing the Elkhorn, and the large white house.

Students Want Air Training In Colleges

By Student Opinion Surveys

AUSTIN, Texas — College youth stands ready to do its part in the half-billion dollar rearmament program that President Roosevelt proposes for the United States.

Specifically, seven-tenths of American college students today approve of the plan to train 20,000 civilian pilots a year in colleges and universities of the nation, a country-wide poll of the Student Opinion Surveys of America shows.

When the president asked Congress to appropriate $10,000,000 for training aviators in cooperation with educational institutions he was in reality allotting college men their part in the task of making the United States safe from the possibility of an invasion. The Surveys have conducted this scientific sampling exclusively for the Kentucky Kernel and the seventy-six other sponsoring student newspapers throughout the nation.

Collegians everywhere have been asked, "Do you approve of President Roosevelt's plan to train an air reserve corps of 20,000 men now in college?"

YES, have answered 71.8 per cent. No, have answered 28.2 per cent. The figures represent the only barometer of public opinion on this question in the particular section of the population—college students—that will be affected by the proposal. Before the idea is tried the second semester with 300 volunteers in seven schools, authorities there and officials in Washington will know that it has the approval of the majority of the student bodies. Only three out of seven are against the program the survey indicates.

The preliminary courses will be offered at the University of Washington, Alabama, and Minnesota, and at Purdue, Texas, A. & M., Georgia Tech, and M. I. T. Defense measures costing $552,000,000 will call for an increase in the air force as one of the paramount points. More planes will mean more aviators. College men are always preferred; so campuses have been assigned as elementary training bases until a reserve of 100,000 pilots has been created. The six-month training will include fifty hours of dual and solo flying. Many are expected to continue at the advanced Army and Navy schools, possibly entering the regular service or becoming reserve officers.

COACH SCHOOL

as head basketball coach at the University of Kentucky. His work has been highly successful and his Wildcats have held undisputed championships of the Southeastern Conference four years, in 1933, 1935, 1937, 1939. The Wildcats' record for the entire period of nine years includes 142 wins against 31 losses. This record is remarkable, since many of the opponents were of national ranking. Besides a host of All-Conference players, Rupp has developed two All-American basketball players at Kentucky—Forest Sale, forward, and LeRoy Edwards, center.

Rupp played basketball in his college days under Coach Phog Allen of the University of Kansas. He played guard on the team reputed to be the best ever developed by Allen, the undefeated Missouri Valley Champions of 1923.

Burt Ingwersen, a member of the 1938 Coaching School staff, is returning this year by popular request. Line coach at Northwestern Fred Foster.

University for the past four years, he is regarded as one of the best tutors of football linemen in the country. Ever since his playing days at Illinois, when he won All-American honors as guard, Ingwersen has been recognized as a thorough technician of all angles of line play.

Following his graduation at Illinois, Burt was assistant to Coach Zupke until 1924. During his first year he was freshman coach and had such players as Red Grange, Early Britton, and Frank Wickhorst on the squad.

In 1925 Ingwersen was called to the University of Iowa where he was head coach for eight years. During that time he turned out many famous players, among whom were Willis Glasgow, Oran Pape, "Cowboy" Kutsh, "Spike" Nelson, and Lee Parkin.

Ab Kirwan, head football coach at the University of Kentucky since 1938, is well-known throughout the state for his successful coaching at Manual High School, Louisville.

Ab entered the University in 1922 and was elected captain of the freshman football squad. He played varsity football 1923-25, and captained his team the last year.

In 1926, Kirwan was appointed varsity backfield coach at the University. From 1927 to 1931 he served as assistant football coach at Male High School, Louisville, and in 1932 was appointed head football coach at Manual High School, Louisville, where he remained in service until his appointment at the University.

While under Kirwan's tutelage, Manual High School teams won four of the six Falls City championships. In 1936, Manual High was undefeated.

'Carmen' To Be Presented At Cincinnati

Cincinnati's summer opera session will reach a smashing climax next week. Gladys Swarthout, one of the most glamorous figures of opera, screen, and radio, will make her first Cincinnati appearance Tuesday, July 25, with a repeat performance Friday, July 28. The vehicle chosen for this sensational occasion is, of course, "Carmen," the most popular and colorful opera in the repertory. It can safely be affirmed that never in the history of Cincinnati summer opera has there been offered so concentrated a broadside of personality, artistry, and colorful entertainment as in this production. Opera patrons living outside Cincinnati are urged to make their reservations quickly by phone or mail, in order to anticipate the heavy local demand.

For Cincinnati, with its strong German population and its tradition of German culture, no season of summer opera would be complete without its Wagner. This summer's Wagnerian opera is "Tannhauser," scheduled for Sunday and Thursday, July 23 and 27. The story of this opera deals with the conflict of carnal with spiritual love, and such famous scenes as the wild Bacchanal with its sensuous Venusberg music, have a universal attraction.

Several artists will make their first Cincinnati appearance at this time.

Elizabeth Wisor has the contralto role of Venus; Mostyn Thomas, the part of Wolfram; Walter Stafford, the part of the Landgraf. For the two leading roles the selected artists are well known: Anne Roselle, who sings in "Trovatore" this week, has the part of Elizabeth; Sydney Rayner, tenor hero of several earlier productions, has the role of Tannhauser.

One of the most important parts of this production is the spectacular Bacchanal, scored with the most sensuous music ever written. Blake Scott has planned an impressive ballet for this scene using an augmented troupe of dancers.

A long-awaited treat is Humperdinck's beloved Children's opera, "Hansel and Gretel," scheduled for July 26 and 29. Last summer's successful experiment has led to the decision to perform this opera again in English. "Hansel and Gretel" not only contains some of the most charmingly simple of all operatic music, but its lovely, familiar fairy story has endeared it to young and old alike. Margot Rebel, a former Cincinnati girl, and Marion Selee, star of last summer's production, are the featured artists in this production.

"Hansel and Gretel" will be paired with Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci," a perennial favorite. Margot Rebel has the role of Nedda; Angelo Pilotta and Harold Lindi will again sing the roles of Tonio and Canio which they have done so brilliantly in the past. Daniel Harris and Lodovico Oliviero complete the cast.

The opera for July 25 and 28, Tuesday and Friday, will be announced at a later date.

Tickets for these operas can be purchased at the Summer Opera Offices at Sixth and Walnut streets, Cincinnati, by mail or telephone. Reserved seats range from 75 cents to $2.00; exchange tickets, exchangeable for reserved seats for any performance of the season, are purchasable in books of eleven for the price of ten. Opera patrons pay no admission to the Zoo Garden, where the performances are given, after 7:15 p. m.; admission paid after this time at the outer gate is refunded when opera tickets are bought at the auditorium. Performances begin at 8:15. Unpaid reservations will be held at the auditorium box office until 7:45 on the night of the performance.

Favor Abolition Of Compulsory Class Attendance

By Student Opinion Surveys
AUSTIN, Texas — Abolition of compulsory class attendance in colleges, a subject seldom mentioned two decades ago, has become an issue of the day. That development seems largely a result of pioneering by educators like Robert M. Hutchins with his Chicago Plan, which allows students to attend classes at their own discretion.

Few schools, however, have followed the lead taken by the University of Chicago. The majority of the nation's colleges still require compulsory class attendance in varying degrees.

Although educators discuss the question among themselves, seldom have they asked the opinions of the students, who are most vitally interested in the question. The Student Opinion Surveys of America are able to give voice for the first time to the students' views on the issue.

The nation's college youth were asked, "Should compulsory class attendance in colleges be abolished?" Yes, said 63.5 per cent.

No, said 36.5 per cent. Even though the poll revealed a sizeable majority who favored abolition of compulsory attendance, the fact that more than a third opposed the idea is significant. It invalidates the claim of many elders that practically all students, if given any say, would do away with compulsory presence in classes.

Breaking down the results sectionally, sentiment favoring abolition is strongest in the East. The Middle Atlantic states showed a majority of 68.7 per cent who answered "yes." In the West and Midwest, students were more evenly divided on the issue. In the West Central states, which include the Chicago section, a bare majority—53.8 per cent—were for abolition. A sophomore art student in the Glendale Junior College of California pointed out that some students can get their work without regular attendance.

Speaking for the opposition, a senior arts and sciences student in Bates College, Maine, believes that most students are not mature enough to allow lifting of compulsory attendance requirements.

Interior Of Faculty Club Gayly Decorated

By VINCENT CROWDUS

Just a dusky, weather discolored exterior, but a gayly, multi-colored interior—that describes the new University Faculty Club home at historic Patterson residence.

The interior color scheme, suggested by Professor Edward W. Rannells, head of the art department, and carried out with some modifications, features two or more different shades or tints in a single room. According to Professor Rannells, the varicolored scheme is being used extensively elsewhere, but seems to be unfamiliar here. He explains that such decoration creates a more effective color of light and, consequently, a more pleasant atmosphere.

Color of light depends upon two factors, the color transmitted thru a window, or other aperture, and the color reflected from the wall surface. Therefore, the use of some light color against an opposite, darker one, imparts a more uniform color within the room and the desired pleasant atmosphere.

The color scheme for the Faculty Club residence is: Stairs hall—pale tints of yellow-brown, pink-brown, and neutral brown.

Drawing room—pale tints of yellow-brown, neutral brown, and mustard yellow-green.

Downstairs passageway—combination of shades and tints; turquoise and pale lemon-yellow tint.

Dining room—shade darker than passageway; tints of neutral brown, turquoise, and lemon-yellow.

Library—warm violet gray and mulberry (neutral cerise).

Card room—pale blue-green, neutral blue-green, and coral red.

Ping pong room—mulberry, turquoise blue, and mustard yellow-green.

Upstairs passageway—pistachio green.

Cloak room—tangerine red and pistachio green.

Professor Rannells suggested the ceiling of the billiards room be dark and relative to the color of the billiards table, because artificial light is concentrated on the table from above. Consequently, its color scheme consists of darker shades of blue, green, and gray.

The reason for the pink-brown combination (essentially the color imparted by the warm violet gray and neutral cerise), Professor Rannells said, is that such a color can be safely used with the furniture and draperies of the room. It makes a person's complexion show up to the best advantage.

The principles for distribution of color in the rooms are as follows:

1. Where different values are allotted to the different walls, the color on the window side must be lighter in value. Colors opposite windows should be relatively darker in value and may be more intense in hue.

Professor Rannells explained that by "value" he meant the "amount of light, i. e., light versus dark." In this case light means "tint" and dark means "shade." Hue simply means color, such as red, yellow, blue, etc.

2. Where two separate hues are used in the same room, and one hue is to appear on two walls, these must be two adjacent walls, never opposite walls. This does not preclude a variation of value and intensity of the line from one wall to the next.

By intensity, Professor Rannells means "amount of hue, i. e., bright versus dull." Bright signifies "intense," and dull, "neutral."

3. The color of the ceiling should be determined by colors already in the room. Make it a tint (lighter value) after hue of the rug or hue of one of the walls.

The new quarters are furnished with pieces moved from the former abode on the top floor of McVey Hall. Formal opening, at a tea and reception was held Friday afternoon, January 30.

The building was erected in 1880-82 as a home for President James K. Patterson in commemoration of his "life and services" to the University. It served as a presidential residence until construction of Maxwell Place. In recent years it was known as the Woman's Building.

UK First School In Kentucky To Fight Syphilis

By VINCENT CROWDUS

A crusade on syphilis, which is rapidly gaining momentum throughout the country, has a definite stamp of collegiate approval. Although the University of Kentucky was the first educational institution in the state to declare open warfare on venereal diseases, other colleges have been combating them as far back as 1930.

At that time the University of Minnesota was giving routine Wassermann tests to upperclassmen as a part of the periodic health examination. All such students of the Colleges of Education, Dentistry, and Medicine were required to undergo the test. They were offered on an optional basis to seniors of the other colleges. Since then the test has been made compulsory.

Over a two-year period at that university only ten positive reactions were obtained from over 5,000 tests, or about 2 per cent. Of these, 17 per cent were boys, and 25 per cent girls. Only one of the group was aware of the infection before the test, and two, previously married, suspected that they might give positive reactions.

Since then editors of college papers throughout the nation have conducted campaigns against a plague that hitherto was so barricaded behind social taboos that it seemed almost impossible to control it. Many insisted that the test be a part of the regular health examination for new students. Still others did not advocate compulsory measures, but wanted the movement run on a voluntary system.

Representatives of newspapers of 26 colleges and universities of the Middle Atlantic States declared open war on the plague at a convention of the Intercollegiate Newspaper Association at Lehigh University last November.

Phillip S. Broughton of the Division of Venereal Diseases of the United States Public Health Service told the session that the syphilis rate in colleges was extremely low, "perhaps the lowest of any group."

At the University of Pittsburgh last year, approximately 1,700 students offered themselves for the test. It was found that positive reactions were extremely rare among undergraduates. The latest report from 7,000 tests at the University of Minnesota shows only six positive cases, and only one of these was an undergraduate.

Dr. Chambers declares that, of all the states, Iowa probably leads in cooperation of higher educational institutions in the crusade. There, practically every college has entered into the campaign wholeheartedly. They have discovered that only about one out of every 3,000 are infected.

Among the universities that are also combating the disease are the Universities of Kansas, Michigan, Ohio, and Oklahoma, where the test is likewise compulsory.

A poll, made by the Institute of Public Opinion last year, among young people, many of whom were college men and women, shows favoring sentiments as follows:

Government bureau to distribute information, 93 per cent.

Government clinics, 92 per cent. Free treatment for all persons affected, 78 per cent.

Punishment of treatment "slackers," 70 per cent.

Premarital tests, 94 per cent.

Willing to take Wassermanns, 90 per cent.

These figures are higher than that of any other age group polled. Consequently, they show that taboos surrounding venereal diseases are breaking down, and one may expect a more extensive crusade in the future.

Behind The Eckdahl

By ANDREW C. ECKDAHL

Some students of music don't mind modern band leaders swinging Bach, but when they start swinging Bach and forth . . .

When you get caught in the last-minute rush don't say we didn't warn you ahead of time. Monday, July 31, is the day on which your 1938-39 driver's license expires.

We have no idea that you will be, but if you should happen to be in the office of the Wilmington (N. C.) Star-News in the near future don't mention safe driving.

The Star-News management had encouraged campaigns for safe driving and the editor addressed graduates of a safety class.

One day recently the mother of the managing editor went to the home of a nephew on learning he had smacked down a traffic cop's motorcycle.

While she was talking to him a hit-and-run driver crashed into her parked car.

The son-in-law of the editor chased the hit-runners and caught them, but returned just in time to see the son of the business manager bowl over a delivery boy on a bicycle.

They carried the boy to the local hospital.

Returning home, son-in-law was ticketed for speeding.

While rummaging through some old copies of The Emory Phoenix, a magazine published at Emory university, Mr. Al Wathen came across a poem which he passed on to us.

Written by one William Rawlings and entitled "The Professor Speaks," the poem is as follows:

My voice drones on. Dull eyes upon my notes.
I hear the tired class twisting in their seats.
I need but raise my eyes to see them stare
With gleams in hungry blurs of weary flesh
To where a mottled road winds into shades.

My voice drones on. The yearning eyes turn back.
Bitter with silenced curses and contempt,
They look at me. I, stolid, nerveless grind,
Drag forth the lifeless lecture endlessly.
I know they hate me and my musty terms.

My voice drones on. A soft breeze stirs my hair.
Desires awake within my shrivelled frame
To hurl my mildewed notes afar and chase the breeze—
But fools pay fools to talk of tiresome things,
And I must live; and so, my voice drones on.

Our Professors Say

"I wouldn't spend my money buying Esquire. I would far rather have Pictorial Review, Woman's Home Companion, or Popular Mechanics."

"Jackson was president. At last we had democracy, and the White House looked like a football stadium after a game."

"For a peaceful nation we have fought a surprising number of wars."

"I am going to ask the president to issue an academic degree to every male and female United States citizen at birth."

"You don't expect great men to be charming."

"We go to brilliant men for ideas, but follow the leadership of ordinary people."

We are sitting in a restaurant the other night at peace with the world and the dean's office when a chap we know comes up and says as follows:

"A man has $14.19 cents in his pocket—bills and coins but no gold. His wife says, 'Hubby, give me ten dollars as I want to buy one of those hats with a feather in it.' Now the bills and coins are of such denominations that the man is unable to give his wife exactly ten dollars. What bills and coins did he have?"

We mull over the problem a while but get nowhere, as we hold to the newspaperman's school of thought that two plus two equals whatever we choose.

Now the thing keeps popping up in our mind at the most odd times, disturbing our composure no end. In fact we are beginning to look a bit wan.

Finally we decide to pass it on to our readers.

We don't know the answer. We have reached the stage where we don't care to know the answer, so don't come around to us with it. All we want to do is forget the whole thing.

A Kentucky colonel of our acquaintance once boasted to a friend that he had on his plantation an Indian who never forgot anything. The devil was listening nearby, and he bet the colonel that he was wrong. The colonel bet his soul that the Indian wouldn't forget.

So the devil went up to the Indian and said, "Do you like eggs?"

"Yes," replied the Indian.

The devil went away.

Twenty years elapsed and the devil returned.

Confronting the old Indian he raised his hand in the customary Indian greeting and said, "How."

"Fried," replied the Indian.

The Stronghold Of Democracy

The Spectator

By JIM CALDWELL

We have been following with interest in the columns of the KERNEL the respective letters of Prof. Knight and Professor Barnes on the subject of the World War, its aftermath and the stand the United States should take in relation to the more or less perpetual international crises.

All of which reminds us of a letter recently printed in the reader-correspondence columns of Life magazine. The letter was written by a young man of "military" age, one of the generation which would be most seriously affected should this nation blunder into the impending World War II. Since few persons as yet have deemed it necessary to ask the opinion of his generation on the matter, we herewith present the letter for the consequent approval or disapproval, as the case may be—of the students and faculty of the University of Kentucky:

"Sirs:

"How does American Youth feel toward the present crisis? What percentage of the youth of the nation is willing for us to become actively involved? Will the American Youth go abroad to fight another war?"

"The facilities of the Gallup poll of the Fortune poll are presumably at the command of all of us to determine the state of public sentiment on any question of public interest. What question could possibly be of more interest than this? Should not we, the young men of this nation, be consulted before guns are thrust into our hands, gas masks hung about our necks, and propaganda rammed down our throats?"

"We are lauded as 'the flower of our country', 'the salvation of our nation,' and 'the perpetrators of a great democracy.' And for what? Merely so that sniveling Congressmen, grasping Industrialists, and an irate president can arouse our 'patriotic instinct' to the point where we shall be willing to commit mass suicide for the preservation of their public dignity."

"I am not an isolationist, I am not a coward. But I am against war, and especially against a war by which this country could not possibly profit. In plain, unvarnished terms, I refuse to fight abroad! I believe that the Maker who created me destined me for a future far more worthwhile than that. If I am to be blown to bits, let it be in an explosion that shall not slightly retard the completion of some great engineering feat. If I am to be gassed, let it be in a laboratory while helping to perfect a cure for some obnoxious disease. And if I am to wallow in the mud, let it be the mud of Stygian darkness which precedes the discovery of some great scientific light."

"True, I am not a genius in a glass cage. But I feel that in my own puny way I shall be worth far more to humanity by staying out of the trenches and keeping myself from being the target of some foreign sharpshooter."

"Before the bigwigs of our nation place our heads within a noose, let them determine just how many of us are willing to preserve their dignity."

"I do not believe myself to be a radical, nor to possess a perverted or distorted mind in any sense. I am merely one of thousands of 24-year-old young men who hate war and who I believe would refuse, as I refuse, to fight for any cause on foreign soil. If this is a truly democratic country, let us all raise our voices in protest and refusal to be used as pawns in the game of International Politics. We are living human beings, possessed of ideas, ideals, and desires which we believe entitle us to go to a greater reward than that of glorious annihilation."

ORANGE BLOSSOMS AT FAIR

Brides may pick their own orange blossoms direct from the tree at the New York World's Fair. All they have to do is to announce to the orange-coated attendants at the Florida exhibit that they are brides. They are conducted into the tropical garden and led up to an orange tree. There is a tradition that the bride who sleeps with a spray of orange blossoms on her pillow will lead a sweet married life.

RUBBER MAN

Fred Jones, the rubber man in one of the shows at the New York World's Fair, is the father of a "bouncing boy" born the other day in a New York City Hospital.

TIME AT THE FAIR

The average visitor to the New York World's Fair spends seven hours, thirteen and a half minutes inside the grounds.

Rights Intertwined

There are in the world approximately one billion human beings who are more or less completely deprived by despotic governments of those human rights which the American Constitution guarantees to all citizens of this country. The guarantees of the Bill of Rights, freedom of worship, freedom of speech, freedom of writing and publication, freedom of assembly, habeas corpus, trial by jury, due process of law, and so on, are denied to them in whole or in part.

Regimentation has taken the place of democratic freedom. Statism has been substituted for the liberties without which man is a pitiful creature indeed. One of the first rights sacrificed in these totalitarian countries was freedom of the press. With that, one by one went other rights which according to the American way of thinking are fundamental, natural, and inviolable. When the right to print no longer is recognized there is no other human right which a government need respect.

The strange thing is that even in the United States citizens generally think of freedom of the press as a right belonging to publishers. It belongs to them only because they are citizens, and as a matter of fact this right inheres in the people and was imbedded in the framework of the Constitution because it was a human right which no state justly can deny. A free press is the right of free people. Without it freedom of speech cannot be maintained. Without free speech freedom of assembly cannot long endure. Without these there will not be the slightest hope of preserving freedom of worship, trial by jury, due process of law, or any other liberty which man claims because of his individual worth and dignity as a child of God.

Unless the American people vigilantly safeguard every one of their rights under the Constitution, the rights of the states, and the independence of the three branches of the federal government, none of their rights can be preserved. To surrender one means ultimately the surrender of all. There have been repeated attacks on the freedom of the press in recent years, some open, some covert. Even the secretary of agriculture, himself a publisher, at least suggested the possibility of federal censorship of news and recommended that the press association set up a board of censors of its own as a means of avoiding anything of the kind.

It needs only be said that if the press once is muzzled, no matter what the excuse may be, no American will long retain his liberties in general as they are defined and guaranteed in the Constitution. The right to print is the right of the citizen, great and small, high and low, rich and poor, strong and weak. It is a fundamental human right.
